SECRET BALLOT ALL NEXT WEEK!

Race Closes One Week From Saturday; Now Is The Time To Work!

They're on the stretch! Workers in the Wm. Semmler Publications Payroll subscription drive are going strong. At this moment honors are about evenly divided and any of the leaders can ride home in that fine new 1936 automobile if the right amount of energy and subscription getting is put into the work between now and the closing hour of the second period, 8 o'clock next Saturday evening, July 11th—the close of the second period—and incidentally the last of the subscriptions to be accepted direct by the payroll manager.

Pace Is Growing Hot
Any doubt as to the closeness of the race has been removed. Also it has been proven that there is a bunch of hustling go-getters in this community who do not stand back on formalities, but pitch right into the fray and get what is coming to them. The race thus far has been a remarkable close one, so it depends almost entirely upon the results attained between now and Saturday night—the last of the BIG VOTE—as to who will finish victorious.

During the last few days, Mrs. Anton Benson of Mokena, who held fourth position last week, has forged to the front and holds first position as we go to press Thursday afternoon.

A close second is Mrs. Alma Brown; third place is held by Dolores Walsh of New Lenox; fourth position is occupied by Isabelle Waldvogel of Frankfort; fifth by Floyd Cooper of Orland Park; sixth by George Price of Tinley Park and seventh by Mrs. Emil Kampe.

But the difference in these seven leaders is so little that any one of them can go into first place between now and Saturday night at 8 o'clock the close of the second period. A few long-term subscriptions placed to the credit of any one of these leaders would put them out in front and practically assure them of first honors and the winning of the grand capital prize—that fine 1936 automobile.

Big Vote Near Finish
Eight o'clock next Saturday night, July 11th, is the last chance to enter subscriptions in this race and secure the high vote thereon. Make every hour, yes, every minute count, while yet you may. After this hour and date all subscriptions together with amounts to cover must be deposited in the sealed ballot box located in the vaults of the Mokena State Bank.

Detail of the final count will be printed in next week's issue and "payrollers" are requested and cautioned to read them carefully and follow the instructions therein to the letter.

St. John's Ev. Picnic

The St. John Evangelical church Sunday school picnic of Mokena will be held Wednesday July 15 at the church. Supper will be served free to pupils. There will be a charge for all others.

Orioles Win 11 - 6

Last Sunday the Mokena Orioles were victorious over New Lenox by a score of 11-6. Mokena, supported by the brilliant twirling of "Shorty" Lauffer gave New Lenox very few hits. Ray Berkholtz of New Lenox couldn't hold the Orioles in check. Next Sunday the Orioles play Peotone at Haydens field at 2:30 p. m. daylight saving time. All the fans are assured a fine afternoon of entertainment, so come and root for your home team.

WILL HOLD OPEN AIR DANCE

An open air dance will be held at the Orland Park Lake Sunday, July 12th. Everyone is invited.

Special Meeting Is Called To Solve Relief Problem

Frankfort Township will take up the matter of adding new taxes to the property owners in order to raise the 30 per cent required for relief purposes at a special town meeting which Supervisor Wm. Kampe advises will be held in the Mokena Motor Sales Garage July 21st.

This special meeting is called for the purpose of raising money and for raising additional money; to make a supplement tax levy to provide for the relief and support of all poor and indigent persons lawfully resident within said town in accordance with the provisions of "An Act to revise the law in relation to paupers", approved March 23rd, 1874, as amended.

Public Service Co. Lays New Gas Pipe

The Public Service Company has had a large force of men at Mokena the past week laying a new gas main from the Rock Island depot west to Wolf Road to replace the old main which has been in need of extensive repairs. It had numerous leaks, caused, it is thought, from the chemical action of the cinders in which the main was laid, eating thru the iron.

Seals To Be Put On Water Meters In Mokena Soon

The Mokena village board at their meeting Tuesday night voted to place seals on all village water meters to prevent theft of water. It was reported that some water users remove the meters during the hot weather and even though they are heavy water users their water bills are not over the minimum, whereas those water users who do not tamper with the meters pay quite a larger amount over the minimum price. The board has decided that any water users who break the seals on the meters before securing permission from the village officers to do so will have their water supply shut off.

Bicycle Riders Make Speedway Of Walks

Of late bicycle riders have been making a speedway of sidewalks in Mokena and in a number of instances children and elderly people have nearly been run down. The Mokena village board has instructed Special Police Officer George Bennett to keep these bicycle riders off the side walks. Any bicycle rider using the streets at night should carry a light on their bicycles to prevent collisions with automobiles.

Thousands Attend Big Tinley Carnival; Many Prizes Given

The big carnival sponsored by the business men and which was advertised for months thru articles in this paper was a far greater success than its promoters had anticipated. The carnival was actually attended by thousands of people during its five days stay in Tinley Park.

The Fourth of July ushered in the carnival. In the evening, the Frankfort band gave a band concert. Later in the evening one of the most magnificent display of fire works ever seen in Tinley Park were fired from the Garden Club park on the south side of the Rock Island tracks. The fireworks display was along the same lines as seen at the Chicago World's Fair.

It is estimated that fully three thousand persons attended the opening night of the carnival. A checkup showed there were over 800 automobiles in the village at different times during the night.

Sunday was the Real Gala day, when the American Legion Posts of Tinley Park, Chicago Heights and Chicago put on a fine parade. Features of the big parade was music by the Frankfort band, Chicago Heights and Lansing Boys Squads, drum and bugle corps of Stanley Sullivan Post, Chicago and the Frenchy Clown band, also of Chicago.

The Frankfort band was awarded first prize. In the drum and bugle corp division, first prize went to Chicago Heights Squadron No. 131 and second prize to Lansing squadron.

Among the floats was a very gorgeous one by the Pure Milk Association with Miss Jennings, the milk maid champion, riding on it. The Niagatri Girls club had a very cute representation of the Dionne Quints riding bicycles. The Tinley Park Bakery and other Tinley Park business houses had decorated trucks and cars in the parade. The following prizes were awarded on floats:

1st prize: Pure Milk Association.
2nd prize: Niagatri Girls Club.
3rd prize: Tinley Park Bakery.

The judges were: Mrs. Imagene O'Mara, 6346 S. Fairfield Ave., Chicago; Mrs. Annie E. Brodie, Mrs. J. Corney both of Chicago; Mrs. Chas. Grupp and Mrs. Alice Lueder both of Chicago Heights.

The Ferris Wheel, and other rides drew a very heavy patronage and the huge crowd estimated at between four and five thousand, remained on the carnival grounds until late in the night. All the booths and concessions did a very fine business.

The following officers from the State Highway Department, Homewood station were sent by Lieut. Mulhausen to assist Chief C. A. Steinhagen in handling the heavy traffic on Oak Park Ave., No. 893, Horwath and No. 880, Gustrine.

The grand climax came Wednesday night when the carnival closed with special cash awards which went to the following: 1st, $25.00 to Mr. Chas. F. Nielsen; 2nd, $15.00, to Mrs. F. Hartwig both of Tinley Park; 3rd, $5, to Viola Mills, Blue Island. Prizes of $1 each went to C. Darron, Chicago, Wm. Semmler, Mokena, Frank Schrage, Inn, Orland, Koenecke & Son, Blue Island.

Sportsman's Inn At Tinley Closes

The Sportsman's Inn which has been operated by George Lorenz in Tinley Park for 19 years, went out of business when its doors closed Tuesday night of this week.

The Orland State Bank have charge of the property now.

A great deal of credit for the big success of the carnival is due to R. Gonia and various members of the Tinley Park Business Men's Association and last but not least to the extensive publicity given the undertaking by this paper, which started playing up the carnival months before it was held.

This affair is said to have been one of the largest and most successful ever held in Tinley Park.

The proceeds paid for all expenses and left a neat surplus in the Association's treasury. All those who were connected with the carnival in any way, all thank the public for the very generous support given the enterprise.

Thermometers Get Hot; Boil Over

A gentle rainfall early Thursday morning, broke the torrid weather which has held the whole country in its grasp the past week. The rain came just in time to save the corn crop and to freshen gardens.

The oat crop is beyond helping as most of the oats have begun to turn. The stand is very irregular. In some fields the stand is good and in others it is very short. Some farmers have turned their stock into the oat fields rather than to cut the short crop.

The hot spell has been one of the worst in years. Thermometers registered anywhere from 110 to 126 degrees. At Orland Park a number of small thermometers boiled out when the temperature went over the 110 mark.

At Mokena a thermometer hanging in the sun in front of the Rock Island depot registered 126 degrees at noon Wednesday.

In Tinley Park a laboratory thermometer placed out in the sun registered 126 degrees.

No cases of sun stroke have been reported thus far.

The extreme heat caused spots in the pavement on 143rd street and other paved roads to literally blow up.

New Lenox Flashes Score Victory

The New Lenox Flashes kittenball team broke even with the St. Cyril Girls of Joliet the latter winning Friday night at New Lenox by a score of 13 to 5, while the Flashes won from them July 4 at the Marley picnic, score 12 to 11. Lois Johnson catcher for the Flashes brought in a home run in the 3rd inning.

New Precincts for Bremen

There are 4500 voters in Bremen township and some of the precincts had as high as 926 voters which at the last primary resulted in the election judges and clerks counting ballots all night until 8 o'clock the following morning. In order to overcome this condition the new precincts have been established and will be used for the first time in the coming November election.

Box Car School, Out in California

By H. M. IVEY

STANDING in the shadows of the high hills, in the rugged fastness of the extreme northern reaches of Mendocino county, California, is a personification of the Little Red School House which may some day become nationally known and nationally famous.

The Bell Springs Station school—the Box Car school, as it is known to the few who have knowledge of its existence—was born out of necessity and is surely one of very few such answers to a definite need, if not the only one in existence.

Bell Spring Station's population is very limited and its present school enrollment numbers eight. The station itself probably owes its existence to the necessity of providing a place of residence for Northwestern Pacific section workers, for in this isolated district, in the heart of the mountains, the railroad's minute men must be on the job, alert and diligent to keep a clear, safe and serviceable track.

The school building is exactly what the name implies—a Northwestern Pacific box car of the conventional box car red, but in arrangement and appointment it serves admirably its purpose and can accommodate a limited increase in attendance.

About 100 feet removed from the railroad right-of-way, well lighted through skylight and eight windows, four on each side, the interior has been done over to make it secure against the blasts of winter. Rattan seats, which have done service in the company's "day coaches," furnish a comfortable seating arrangement before the sloping desks. The "front" of the building, toward which the students face, is provided with desk and table for use of the teacher.

Box Car school was made possible by the interest and co-operation of the Northwestern Pacific high officials, even E. H. Maggard, president and general manager, having lent aid to the project. Others who found time to give consideration to the future of Bell Springs Station youth were William Neff, general superintendent, and M. L. Gillogly, company valuation agent.

If fortunate in finding sympathetic railroad officials, Box Car school was especially fortunate to secure the services of Miss Florence Owens as teacher, one who is entirely in sympathy with her task and discharges her duties with enthusiasm.

Bedtime Story for Children

BOBBY COON GETS A FRIGHT

BOBBY COON walked slowly down the bank of the Laughing Brook to the little fence with the little opening in it in which he knew a trap was hidden. Bobby was not at all easy in his mind. He didn't know much about traps. If he had known more about them than he did he would have been less afraid. Looking across the Laughing Brook he could see a little brown form bounding along the other bank in the moonlight. It was Billy Mink. He knew that Billy was not afraid and that Billy was going to do on that side of the Laughing Brook what he himself had agreed to do on his side.

Bobby approached the little opening in that fence made of sticks, and studied it carefully. Billy Mink had said there was a trap there, but look as he would, Bobby couldn't see a sign of one. Some wet, dead leaves lay in the little opening in the fence and nothing else was to be seen. Billy Mink had said the trap was under those leaves. Bobby wondered how Billy Mink knew. Billy had told him that there was no danger except right in that little opening.

Very cautiously Bobby pulled away the dead leaves that covered the ground on his side of the little fence in front of the opening. He even dug down into the sand a little. Presently his fingers caught something hard. He pulled them away as if they had been burned. Nothing happened. Curiosity gave Bobby new courage. He dug away very carefully the leaves and sand at that particular spot and presently he uncovered something shiny. Anything bright and shiny always interests Bobby Coon. Again he touched it and snatched away his paw. Nothing happened. Then Bobby got hold of that shiny thing and pulled ever so gently. The leaves in the little opening in the fence moved. Bobby pulled again. Those leaves moved some more. You see, Bobby had hold of the chain of that hidden trap. Finding that there was nothing dangerous about the chain, Bobby continued to pull and presently there was the trap itself right in front of him. He sat down and studied it. He wondered how it worked. He was afraid of it but he was very, very curious. There it lay with its paws spread wide. Bobby remembered that Billy Mink had said that there would be no danger if he put his paw under it. Very cautiously he slipped a paw underneath. All of a sudden that trap jumped right off the ground. There had been a wicked sounding snap and those two jaws flew up and came together so swiftly that Bobby didn't really see what had happened. He had sprung the trap.

Bobby didn't wait to see what had happened or what was going to happen next. He almost turned a back somersault in his hurry to get away from the strange thing. He scurried along back up the Laughing Brook as if he expected that trap would follow him.

RECIPES WORTH TRYING

SANDWICHES are something that are like the poor—"always with us"—and a new filling is always greeted with a kind welcome. Here is one that is called:

Delicious Sandwich Filling.

Mix the following ingredients thoroughly and spread on bread or toast: One cupful each of peanut butter and grape jelly, one cupful of chopped raisins and one cupful of chopped pecan meats.

Apple Cinnamon Waffles.

Take one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-third teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth cupful of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two eggs well beaten, one cupful of milk, one and three-fourths cupfuls of diced apples and three tablespoonfuls of shortening (melted). Mix and bake on a hot waffle iron. Serve with butter and brown sugar.

Baked Steak.

Place a three-pound sirloin steak in a flat baking dish, spread with butter, after boning the steak. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and add a thin layer of lemon slices, then one layer of chopped green pepper and a third layer of onion slices. Use two large Bermuda onions and one green pepper, one lemon. Cover with two cupfuls of catsup and place in a hot oven to bake, allowing twenty minutes to the pound. Add mushrooms to the gravy in the pan and serve with the steak.

Prune Hearts.

Soak one dozen prunes over night and cut into small pieces. Wash and trim a beef heart, making several gashes in it. To the prunes add six graham crackers, one-eighth teaspoonful of salt and fill the heart cavities. Skewer with toothpicks, and lace with cord to hold in the stuffing. Add the juice of half a lemon to the prune juice and pour over the heart. Bake often while roasting for one and one-half hours.

THE COIN IN THE KNOT

The magician takes a handkerchief and twists it into the form of a loose rope. He brings the ends together and ties a knot in the center of the handkerchief.

He commands a coin to appear in the knot. He hands the handkerchief to a spectator, who discovers that the coin is there. The handkerchief must be untied in order to remove the coin.

At the start of the trick the magician has the coin concealed in the folds at one end of the handkerchief. When he lets the center of the handkerchief sag, he releases the coin. It slides through the cloth tube and stops at the center. The magician simply ties the knot around it.

REMEMBERING

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHEN some old road we wind again,
Some road we walked in other days,
The things we seek to find again
Are flowered fields and shaded ways—
Avoid the rocks that hurt our feet
And take the pathway that was sweet.

And when the mind goes wandering
Along the long age of life,
What folly to sit pondering
Upon the sadness and the strife—
When we might walk the better years,
Recall the smiles, forget the tears.

Beside the fading ember, then
Let love recall the better thing,
The mind alone remember then
The moments worth remembering—
Avoid the rocks that hurt our feet
And take the pathway that was sweet.

White Linen Hat

White stitched linen forms this flattering hat for Anita Colby, film player. A white linen suit is worn to match and the flowers which form the trimming on the hat exactly match the red of the blouse. Over the crown is placed a wide-meshed veil.

FOR the first time since the war, foreign military attaches and the public saw the Royal Tank corps in action at Lulworth, Dorset, England, recently. The squadron, part of which is shown above, used service shells and machine-gun bullets against moving targets.

Crochet That Is New and Quite Simple to Do

Pattern 5544

"Can anyone do it?" Most assuredly! It is a lovely rug, a matching foot-stool top or pillow for quick crocheting. Easy, six-sided medallions are done one by one, each flower a different color with background uniform or not, as you please. Sew them together and you're ready to begin the border crochet, going round and round with stripes of color used to break the background. Rug wool, rags or candlewicking may be used.

In pattern 5544 you will find complete instructions for making the rug shown; an illustration of it and of all stitches needed; material requirements; color suggestions.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) to The Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth St., New York, N. Y. Write plainly pattern number, your name and address.

As Viewed in 2136

"In 2136 the western, adventure and detective stories which we are now reading for fun are going to be read by scholars for information about the life and customs of 1936," according to Dr. Ruth Benedict, assistant professor of anthropology at Columbia university.

"And if those who study our 1936 westerns in 2136 should take them as gospel truth—as they are in some parts of the world—it would appear that you couldn't get west of Hoboken without a six-gun, a horse, and a 10-gallon hat."

THE RETURN OF PETEY

A CARRIER pigeon can be relied on to do the spectacular. Glenn Butcher, doughboy of the Sixth infantry, after serving his country in France, established a pigeon farm near Lockport, Ill. Liking all pigeons, his greatest affection was reserved for a carrier named Petey.

Petey demonstrated once that Butcher's love was reciprocated. It was when an unidentified fiend visited Lockport, committed a score of crimes and concluded by stealing Petey and taking him to Chicago. Butcher learned later the thief climbed to the top of the tallest building in Chicago, unfasted Petey and threw him overboard. Then, to show his fiendish nature, the kidnaper threw a wooden box at the falling bird.

The pigeon broke a leg in his 600-foot fall but retrieved the box, which landed nearby, and hobbled toward the river. There he produced a swaggy stick Butcher had used in France, climbed on the box and, steering a winding course by means of the stick, started home.

Bulletins told of the pigeon navigator's progress, but Petey was too proud to accept aid. He negotiated the 45 miles of river channel alone in seven days, limping into Butcher's yard one morning, swaggy stick under his wing. It not only gave him a jaunty appearance but served for a crutch as well.

AN 8-INCH TALE

SHELL games are not the only activity wherein the hand may be quicker than the eye.

So ruminates Buck Pyle, once of Clarendon, Texas, when he recalls the famous hunting trip undertaken by two of his father's ranch hands.

The cowboys, Sam and Henry, found buffalo tracks almost immediately. They spied two buffalo, and each fired at a different animal. Henry's buffalo sped over a mountain range with Henry in close pursuit and was lost to view. Sam wounded his game and the injured buffalo charged. His pony wheeled, slipped into the deep grass and unseated the rider.

Sam rose to a sitting position, terrified at the approach of the huge animal. He ducked just as the charging buffalo hurtled past, then he straightened suddenly, grasped the wounded buffalo by the tail and hung on.

He could not hope to subdue the maddened beast, but neither could the animal attack him. So Sam clung to the buffalo's eight-inch tail until just before the wild runner crossed the Mexican boundary. Then he reached out with a poplar tree he'd gathered en route, tickled the buffalo's nose and turned him back.

When Sam had guided the buffalo in this fashion until they reached Donley county, Henry rode up and rescued his friend.

The regrettable effect of the incident, says Pyle, is that Sam won't accept a buffalo nickel now, even if you offer him three for a dime.

THE EXTENDED PALM

A GREATER number of extended palms can be found in the state of Florida than in all of France.

One of them, a royal palm, grows in front of the ninth green of the De Leon Springs golf course, its foliage frequently catching balls pitched toward the green.

That happened to John H. Fisher of Chicago the first time he stepped on the De Leon Springs links to try for his usual 76. The ball lodged in the tree and only the gift of a 59-cent dollar persuaded his colored caddy to retrieve it.

Climbing to the top of the tree the caddy gave one vigorous shake and Fisher's ball and 376 other golf balls dropped. It was the first time the royal palm had been shaken.

The golfer was astonished to discover that thirteen of the balls had his name printed on them.

"It was my initial visit to Florida, all right, but that was no reason my entire name should have been printed on the balls," Fisher said later. "I didn't discover why until four months afterwards."

"I play the Tam o'Shanter course at Chicago. On the fifth tee I invariably slice my drive, frequently losing the ball. Well, I began to analyze my shots off that tee, employing a compass and other research equipment."

"And I discovered a most interesting thing—every one of my sliced shots off that fifth tee moved in a curving line directly toward De Leon Springs from Chicago."

Early Strikes in America

The first recorded strike in America took place in 1741, when New York bakers quit work as a protest against a municipal ordinance regulating the price of bread. The earliest known strike for higher wages took place in 1786, when the Philadelphia printers ceased work as a means of enforcing their demand for a minimum weekly wage of $6. The first organized strike in America took place in 1799, when the shoemakers belonging to the Federal Society of Journeymen Cordwainers, were compelled to lay down their tools in order to aid the bootmakers who were seeking an increase in wages.

Keep Young Pigs Away From Worms

Better Than to Doctor Them After They Have Become Infested.

By H. W. TAYLOR, Extension Swine Specialist, North Carolina State College, WNU Service.

Plow up that wormy old hog lot and plant it to some crop. Roundworms are very injurious to young pigs. It is better to keep them away from worms than to dose them with worm medicine after they have become infested.

A few days before farrowing time scrub the sow thoroughly with a brush, using soap and warm water to remove dirt and worm eggs. Then put the sow in a clean field containing a suitable forage crop where there have been no hogs for at least 12 months.

Keep other pigs and hogs away from the clean lot, and keep new born pigs away from old, dirty hog lots. Leave the pigs on pasture until they are at least four months old. If possible, leave them there until ready for market or until they can be turned into the corn fields.

For summer pasture, plant soy beans in rows, cultivate them twice, and turn in the pigs when the beans are about 12 inches high.

Pigs after being farrowed should be castrated, weaned, and started on full feed two months later. Fill the self-feeder with shelled corn and fish meal or tankage so the pigs can help themselves.

When cottonseed meal is cheap, it may be mixed with the fish meal or tankage in equal parts. Soy bean meal or peanut meal may be used in place of cottonseed meal in the mixture.

Corn should not be mixed with other feeds. Put it in a separate compartment in the feeder.

All pigs and hogs should have access to a mineral mixture made up of ten pounds of superphosphate, ten pounds of lime, and two pounds of salt.

30 to 40 Leaves Needed to Produce Good Peach

How many leaves are required to produce enough food to develop a good peach? Experiments by the United States Department of Agriculture indicate at least 30 to 40 leaves are necessary. Forty to fifty leaves are required to develop a good-sized apple, and about 50 for an orange.

Producers of large peaches provide larger leaf areas—more than 40 leaves per peach—by thinning the fruit closely. This permits the peaches left on the tree to get more food from the leaves. When the fruit set is light for the entire tree—but perhaps heavy on certain branches and the leaves plentiful—the fruit may be left unthinned.

After a damaging freeze fruit may set only at the base of the shoots. When this occurs the leaves on the bearing and nonbearing shoots will under favorable conditions produce peaches of good size and quality although the fruit may be only a few inches apart.

Change Color of Onions

Science has taken another stride forward in saving the farmer thousands of dollars a year by "painting" onions a golden-brown color. Minerals are used instead of ordinary paints and the onions grow golden brown in color with thick skins instead of a lemon yellow with thin skins. The painting is done with the application of copper sulphate on muck soil, according to Prof. J. E. Knott of Cornell University. Farmers, the professor said, found it difficult to sell their onions as long as they remained a lemon-yellow color with thin skins.

Cow Barn Fertilizer

The liquid from a cow barn can be applied as a stimulant to the garden, but it will not take the place of a complete fertilizer, according to an authority. Its composition will probably vary. It is applied to hurry growth. It should not be used when the ground is dry, as the roots might take it up so rapidly as to cause injury. Apply when the soil is moist, after a rain. It is usually given at intervals of two weeks; there should be rain or irrigation between applications.

Growth of Corn

Corn probably grows most rapidly on warm nights. According to the United States bureau of plant industry, the rate of growth is influenced by many factors other than the formation of food materials through photosynthesis, and the photosynthetic products themselves may require further change before being utilized in growth. Some plants actually grow more rapidly at night under ordinary conditions than they do during the day.

The Hay Supply

While grass and legumes are important from the standpoint of soil improvement, they are equally as important in producing adequate fodder for live stock. Too often farm animals suffer from insufficient hay or pasture when a little planning and seeding would have provided ample. Yields vary considerably, but hay, if properly cured or stacked, will keep in good condition for many years, so it is possible to put up a surplus hay in good years.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—The arrival of the first robin does not guarantee the immediate arrival of spring but when the first robin is observed, folks generally consider that there is little left of winter. An out and out bolt by an individual in party politics likewise does not guarantee important defections, but, like the arrival of the early robin, an individual bolt, if he be a man of consequence, has a story of its own to tell. A bolt in party politics never attracts attention unless the bolting individual is of some consequence and, therefore, has a personal following. Thus it is that when we observe a bolt by a nationally known individual from his lifelong political affiliation, we immediately understand its significance. The scope of this significance, however, is the thing that concerns us.

Nearly everyone knows now that former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, Democratic Presidential nominee in 1928, has made known that he cannot support President Roosevelt for re-election. They know as well that the four other individuals who asked the Democratic National convention to push Mr. Roosevelt aside and nominate a Democrat can be classified as important individuals along with Governor Smith. No one dare say that former Sen. James A. Reed of Missouri, former Governor Ely of Massachusetts, Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state in Woodrow Wilson's administration and Daniel F. Cohan, one time Tammany chieftain, are unimportant in politics. They have consistently figured in Democratic party councils and thus it becomes apparent that these five robins presage something more than just their own departure from the ranks of Roosevelt supporters.

I make this statement notwithstanding the declaration by James A. Farley that he would not dignify their statement with a reply. Of course, Mr. Farley as postmaster general, chairman of the Democratic National committee, chairman of the New York State Democratic committee and delegate to the Democratic National convention, necessarily was a very busy man at the time the Smith statement, refusing support to President Roosevelt, was released for publication. Nevertheless, I am in a position to know that the Smith statement threw quite a scare into New Deal ranks. Frankly, they did not like it.

How much they do not like the Smith statement remains to be seen. I believe that no one can forecast exactly how much strength this group can pull away from Mr. Roosevelt in the November election. Much will depend upon their personal activities henceforth. If men like Smith and Jim Reed and Ely take the stump, if they go out onto the hustings and actually campaign for Governor Landon, the Republican nominee, it seems to me obvious that such campaigning will damage the Roosevelt cause materially.

It was the natural strategy for Mr. Farley to follow in declining comment on the Smith defection. His assertion that the Smith statement was so unimportant as to require no reply will be convincing to a very great many voters who already have made up their minds to support Mr. Roosevelt. But the truth is that the election has not been won yet by either side and any votes that are influenced by such a group as that headed by Governor Smith will have weight in the final determination of our next President.

The Smith defection becomes the more important in my opinion because it occurred almost simultaneously with the development of a third party under the leadership of Rep. William Lemke, of North Dakota. This picture may not be entirely clear to everyone. It is substantially this: Lemke and his colleagues are attempting to draw together the extreme radicals, the leftist groups. The bulk of these will come from the Democratic party if the Lemke organization develops any particular strength. The Smith group represents the conservative, or rightist, element in the Democratic party. Thus we see detraction from the Roosevelt strength on two sides.

I do not mean to say here that the combination of these circumstances will insure President Roosevelt's defeat. Anyone who would make such a declaration at this time demonstrates his lack of knowledge of political maneuvers. What I am seeking to show, however, is that robins have arrived in the back yard and in the front yard of the New Deal party and if the leaders of the two obstreperous groups engage viciously in this campaign, the time may come when Mr. Farley will recognize their importance.

There already has been evidence of the influence of the Lemke radical segment. I think everyone agrees that the announcement of the third party's organization vitally affected the type of platform that was written in Washington and adopted by the Democratic convention at Philadelphia. From many sources comes information that the Democratic platform was made much more liberal—some critics describe it as more socialistic—than would have been the case had Representative Lemke stayed out of the political picture. He has the backing of Father Coughlin, the Detroit radio priest, and his national union for social justice and he has the backing of the remnants of the late Huey Long's share-the-wealth adherents. In addition, the Townsend $200-a-month pension followers will be found behind Lemke to some extent.

I have observed these third party movements many times before and usually they have failed to live up to expectations. They nearly always have developed fights among themselves because the very nature of and the very reason for their existence lies in their varied conceptions of what government ought to be or ought to do. Their sincerity precludes them usually from compromise and when politicians refuse to compromise, their organization, whatever it may be, naturally disintegrates.

This may be the year when the leftist segment will stick together and if it does, it naturally threatens Mr. Roosevelt's success. I confidently expect to see overtures seeping out from New Deal sources in an effort to placate some of the Lemke followers. It is a logical piece of strategy for the New Dealers to seek to wean these recalcitrant folks from the third party.

The European disturbances continue apace. It is a situation that is extremely interesting and one that probably will unfold as the weeks go by, in curious ways. I say curious because to us in America, it has been rather difficult to understand the meaning of many of the maneuvers that followed the outright subjugation of Ethiopia by the power thirsty Mussolini of Italy.

Word that comes rather direct from inner councils in Europe indicates a tremendous fear on the part of Italy and France about German plans. The British likewise are displaying nervousness and the present alliances and combinations of power existing in Europe are none too stable. It is just possible that Germany's Hitler may, by his present activities, force a new cementing of these alliances and understandings among other powers but at this time there is no mistaking the fact that Europe, outside of Germany, is a bundle of nerves.

It seems that the basis for this nervousness is rooted in the clever scheming of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, who is something of an economic dictator under Hitler. Dr. Schacht is a brilliant negotiator. He understands economics, trade and finance as well as any man in Europe today and when you couple such knowledge with diplomatic keenness, you obviously have a man capable of accomplishing results.

Dr. Schacht is employing the methods he knows best, namely, economic understandings, in making new connections with central European power and the Balkan states.

In the case of Italy, an economic weapon in the hands of Germany might easily prove disastrous because Italy virtually exhausted her gold reserve in the late war and her government cannot go on much longer in furnishing purchasing power for her people. France has been able to open certain markets to the little entente and to the Balkans and has, in addition, provided some financial aid. Thus, when Dr. Schacht pats the neighbors of Germany, on the back and points out where markets can be made for them in Germany, France and Italy quickly develop cases of jitters.

It seems that Austria and Hungary cannot depend fully on Italian markets because of the low gold reserve in Italy. In the meantime as well, France has been losing millions in gold as her own domestic situation has been embroiled in a political whirlpool. The Austrians and the Hungarians and some of the other central Europeans recognize that unless France gets straightened out, there will not be purchasing power available there for their surplus produce. So, Dr. Schacht is cultivating what appears from this distance to be a fertile field.

WITNESSING UNDER PERSECUTION

LESSON TEXT—Acts 3:1-4:31.
GOLDEN TEXT—We ought to obey God rather than men.—Acts 5:29.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Brave Peter and John.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Two Brave Preachers.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Two Brave Witnesses.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Courageous Witnessing for Christ.

In I Corinthians 1:21-25, Paul sets forth the attitude of the world toward Christ and his gospel. The one who preaches Christ crucified must expect opposition, and even violent persecution. This attitude of the world, instead of being a deterrent, should be a spur to activity.

1. Peter Healing the Lame Man (Acts 3:1-11).

The place (vv. 1, 2). It was at the beautiful gate which leads from the outer to the inner court of the temple. This helpless man had been placed at the entrance of the place of worship where he might receive the sympathetic attention of worshippers.

2. The man (v. 2). This beggar was infirm from his birth. He was not more than forty years old (Acts 4:22). When he saw Peter and John, he asked alms.

3. The method (vv. 3-8).

a. Gaining the man's attention (v. 4). Peter and John commanded him to look on them. He asked for money and got healing.

b. Peter commanded him in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth to rise and walk (v. 6). This was the very thing he had been unable to do all his life, but with the command went the ability to do.

c. Peter took him by the right hand (v. 7), gave impetus to his faith, not strength to his ankles.

4. The man's response (v. 8). Strength at once came to him. He stood, walked, leaped, and shouted praises to God.

5. The effect (vv. 9-11). The people were so filled with wonder that they ran together to behold this thing. There could be no question as to the genuineness of the miracle for the man had been a familiar figure for many years.

a. This helpless man had to be carried to the temple. Men and women out of Christ are so helpless that they need to be brought where the life of God can be applied to them.

b. Peter, taking the man by the hand, shows the manner of helping the lost. Christian witnesses should bring them to Jesus.

II. Peter Witnessing Before the Multitude (Acts 3:12-26).

Though this miracle directed the attention of the people to Peter and John, Peter seized the opportunity to present Christ to the people.

III. Peter in Prison for Christ's Sake (Acts 4:1-4).

1. The leaders. Both priests and Sadducees joined in this persecution (vv. 1, 2).

The priests were intolerant because these new teachers were encroaching upon their functions. The Sadducees did not believe in the resurrection, which was a vital part of the apostolic preaching.

2. The result (vv. 3, 4). Though they were held in bondage by chains, Christ continued to work. The number of believers greatly increased.

IV. Peter Witnessing Before the Sanhedrin (Acts 4:5-21).

1. The inquiry (vv. 5-7). The inquirers admitted the reality of the miracle but they wanted to know what it signified.

2. Peter's answer (vv. 8-12). With stinging sarcasm he showed them that they were not on trial as evildoers, but for doing good in the name of Christ to the helpless and needy man.

3. The impression upon the Sanhedrin (vv. 13-21).

a. They marveled (v. 13). They were made conscious that they were on trial instead of sitting as judges.

b. They took knowledge that Peter and John had been with Jesus (v. 13).

c. They forbade them to speak in Christ's name (v. 18). They could not deny the miracle or gainsay the accusation brought against them, so they attempted intimidation.

d. Peter and John's reply (vv. 19, 20). They expressed their determination to obey God rather than men.

e. Their release (v. 21). Seeing that the people were on the side of the apostles, the rulers were helpless.

V. The Church at Prayer (vv. 23-31).

As soon as Peter and John were set free, they hastened to their fellow disciples and told their experiences. They praised God for deliverance and prayed for boldness to speak the Word of God.

Pulling Together

If the money getters would line up behind the knowledge getters, and all pull together in a definite well-organized plan, we'd raise the standards of human life higher than the most fantastic imagination ever dreamed they could be raised.

Loving Others

One whom I knew intimately and whose memory I revere, once in my hearing remarked that, "unless we love people we cannot understand them." This was a new light to me.—Rossetti.

All Around the House

Air the bread and cake boxes frequently during the summer months. Mould is likely to form on breads and cakes kept in boxes during the warm weather.

Do not remove husks from green corn until just before putting on to boil. Corn spoils quickly, so it should be used as soon as possible after purchasing.

Mayonnaise may be kept for several weeks in refrigerator if a tablespoonful of boiling water is added to it before bottling.

Sandwiches may be kept moist for 24 hours if they are wrapped tight as soon as made, in waxed paper, then placed in a box lined with a damp cloth and covered with a cloth. Keep in a cool place.

A little garlic rubbed over the broiler on which steak is broiled gives steak a delicious flavor.

Never put hot foods in your refrigerator or ice box. Wait until they have cooled.

Chamois wet in cold water and wrung dry will polish mahogany furniture that has become cloudy.

When cake or bread is too brown or is burned, grate gently with a fine grater (nutmeg grater preferred) until the cake or bread is a golden brown.

Clarendon's Influence

The right man in the right place at the right time often can change destiny, as appears from a story told about the Franco-Prussian war. Lord Clarendon, Britain's foreign minister, died just three weeks before the war's opening. How powerful his influence was is seen by the fact that a year after the war, Clarendon's daughter sat next to Bismarck in Berlin when Bismarck turned to her and said: "Never in my life was I more glad to hear anything than I was to hear of your father's death. . . . had he lived, he would have prevented the war."

TINLEY PARK

Miss Joy Berg is once more able to be out after her recent illness.
The National Union for Social Justice is gaining membership in Tinley Park and the meetings are very interesting to the voters of next November.

Mrs. John Neff's funeral was held at Oak Forest last Sunday. It was a very large funeral. Rev. Paul Hastings conducted the funeral services and preached the sermon. The floral offerings were many and showed the high esteem in which Mrs. Neff was held in this community.

The pall-bearers were members of the Royal Neighbors. They also conducted services at the grave.

The Misses Vera, Evelyn and Gen-ieve Oulman spent the 4th of July at the home of their parents Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Oulman.

The English family are soon to move from the Stockman flat to the Hartwick house on the east side.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Hug were visiting at the Hug residence on July 4th.

The Golden Needle club visited the Oak Forest infirmary in company with Mrs. J. S. Oulman. They also donated shoes, jelly, wash cloths, soap and second hand clothes to the inmates. Anyone having any of these articles to donate, please notify Mrs.
J. S. Oulman or some of the club members.

Mrs. Ada Bagby of Danbury,
Nebraska is visiting at her son's home in Tinley Park. She will return to her home in Nebraska about August first.

The Golden Needle club will meet at Mrs. J. S. Oulman's home on Tuesday at 3 p. m. All members please bring crochet work and crochet hook. Any girl between the ages of 9 years and 15 years who wishes to join us, is welcome to come and join. The object of the club is to sew and do charitable acts.

The Brown Campbell family will leave on July 18th on a vacation trip to South Carolina where they will visit with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Hug who have been residents of Tinley Park for the past 22 years, are preparing to move to Chicago soon. Their many friends regret to see them leave. Mrs. Hug has been very active in the Tinley Park Garden Club.

Florence Witte was the winner in the Studio Bazaar Merchandise Club award Wednesday. The membership of this club has now increased to 94
members.

The funeral of Henry Schreiber held last Friday afternoon, was very largely attended. The deceased was the son of George Schreiber and was born in Goseville in 1890. He has been residing in Chicago for many years.

Village Clerk Chas. Nieman and family are preparing to go on a vacation trip to Overton, Nebraska to visit with relatives.

The matter of improving the street by the Hollstein property and building a concrete sidewalk along this street was taken up by the village board at their meeting Monday night and is being acted upon.

A large number of visitors went thru the new model steel house in the south Elmore subdivision over the week end and Sunday.

George Lorenz who has been operating the Sportsman's Inn and the Saenger Hall, has moved into the south Elmore subdivision.

Edward Henke made a trip to Des Moines, Iowa the forepart of the week.

Mrs. F. Hartwig has returned from Wisconsin where she was called by the death of her brother.

James English and family are moving into the Hartman dwelling.

About two of the hottest places in Tinley Park during the torrid days of this week were the Tinley Park Bakery and the G. Dini kitchen where the thermometers stood at 120 degrees and over.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our deep appreciation and thanks for the many acts of kindness and sympathy shown us in our sudden bereavement in the death of our beloved wife and mother. We wish to thank Rev. Paul Hastings for his comforting words and all those who sent floral offerings.

Have you ever wondered if people in Jesus' day were not decidedly different from ourselves? A casual glance might suggest an affirmative answer. But when one really studies the character of those lives pictured in the New Testament, he discovers that they were very similar to us moderns.

Nert Sunday we are to consider how Jesus dealt with human nature.
Needless to say, in our day human nature has been made the scapegoat for many of our weaknesses and failures. "To err is human" has become the classic excuse for all our misdeeds. But did Jesus find it so?
It has been said of him that "he knew what was in man." The gospel records give us several instances of his dealing with erring human nature. We shall hope to have a profitable time studying "Jesus and Human Nature" next Sunday morning.

Our final quarterly conference for the year will be held on Saturday evening, July 25. Our district superintendent, Dr. R. M. Pierce, will be our guests for the evening. Announcement concerning the complete program will be made next
week.

On Sunday, July 19, we are planning a church school service that will be different, and we believe of interest to our boys and girls. Instead of having regular class sessions that morning, we shall conduct a Children's Church Service, in which the boys and girls will have a large part themselves. We shall make complete announcement of this next Sunday morning.

Fewer Aches and Pains More Health and Pleasure

PAIN drags you down—physically, mentally, morally.

Why continue to endure it? Try Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills for Headache, Neuralgia, Muscular, Rheumatic, Sciatic, and Periodic Pains. They seldom fail.

Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills are pleasant to take and prompt to act. They do not upset the stomach, cause constipation or leave you with a dull, depressed feeling.

Ask your druggist or any of the hundreds of thousands enthusiastic users. Probably you too can find relief.

I think all Dr. Miles medicines are wonderful, but Anti-Pain Pills are my favorite.

Mrs. Doc Blankenship, Stamford, Texas
I have used your Anti-Pain Pills only a short time, but they have given me prompt relief. They did for me in a week more than any other medicine I had taken for a year.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin
I am never without Anti-Pain Pills. I think they are much better than anything else I have ever used. Sometimes when I am tired and nervous, and feel like I would go under, I take two Anti-Pain Pills and in a sort time I feel like a different person.

Mrs. S. Tidabach,
Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania

Your Anti-Pain Pills have been used in my home with wonderful results. I recommend them.

Maggie Belle Dudley, Vanceboro, N. C.
Your Anti-Pain Pills helped me a great deal. I have used them for years. I carry them everywhere in my purse and always keep them in the house. They have saved me a great many sick headaches.

Mrs. Jennie Neill,
Coronado, Calif.

SPEED WILL WIN!

RUSHING THROUGH THE LAST WEEK in their final effort for supremacy, workers in the WM. SEMMLER Weekly Payroll subscription drive are racing forward swiftly and determinedly toward the goal where the treasure chest at the end of the rainbow hoves in sight.

Throughout the territory covered by the Semmler Publications the electrifying news has been broadcast that the golden horn of plenty is about to be tipped over, and payrollers, their fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, sweethearts, husbands and wives are bending every effort that their favorite may be returned the victor. As a final warning, don't be afraid of having too many votes; you can't have too many! It would be better to win the prize you want by a million votes more than enough than to be beaten by a few hundred thousand--representing a mere handful of subscriptions.

Ice Skating in Texas in June

BELIEVE IT OR NOT—but there's ice skating in Texas this summer; and here's the proof of it. It's on the ice floor of the Black Forest, many-featured Midway attraction of the $25,000,000 Texas Centennial Exposition which opened in Dallas June 6.

60 Years to Make Good for Parents

CENTENNIAL SHAFER AT CENTENNIAL.—His parents named him Centennial 60 years ago, when he was born, June 6, 1876. Sixty years later, Centennial Shafer bought the first ticket as the Texas Centennial Exposition opened in Dallas.

Dallas Streets of Paris Thronged

BOAT CENTER OF FAIR FUN SPOT.—An exact reproduction of the outlines of the liner Normandie forms the front center of "The Streets of Paris," gay fun spot of the $25,000,000 Texas Centennial Exposition which will run in Dallas until November 29. Flanking the ship is a French Village forming an open-air court of concessions.

Two Texas Governors on Midway

ALLRED AND NEFF RELAX A BIT.—Gov. James V. Allred found a bit of time to frolic on the $5,000,000 Midway as he helped open the Texas Centennial Exposition in Dallas. He is shown here pushing former Governor Pat Neff, now president of Baylor University, in a ricksha. Janice Jarratt, "Sweetheart of Texas," is in the other ricksha.

Roper Greeted at Exposition

Voice 'Round the World at Fair

GLOBE-CIRCLING VOICE.—Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, formally opened the Texas Centennial Exposition in Dallas. His voice, circling the world by wire and air, two minutes later snapped the ribbon shown above and opened the main gate.

First Casualty at Exposition

RANGERETTE QUILTS OPENING DAY—Helen Stamps, Texas Centennial Exposition Rangerette, flew 10-gallon hats to Washington for President Roosevelt's party to wear to Dallas June 12. June 6, opening day, she wired Exposition officials she had been hired as a New York photographic model.

Contrast in Texas Dogs

Don, 218-pound Great Dane, and Blue Bonnet Sue, 2 pound, nine ounce Pekingese met at the Texas Centennial Exposition grounds at Dallas, where during the June 6-Nov. 29 run of the $25,000,000 World's Fair, some of the nation's finest dogs will be displayed in kennel shows. Don is a feature attraction of the Midway's "Hollywood Animal Stars."

SILVER DOLLAR BRADY RENTS PENTHOUSE FOR PRIZE HORSE

Silver Dollar Brady, wealthy cowboy from Dallas, has the world's first "penthouse corral" high above Chicago on the 17th floor of Hotel Sherman. Brady and his horse are shown here "at home" looking out over the city's attractive skyline.

"More Silver Dollars in circulation will bring back better business conditions a whole lot faster." That's the idea of Silver Dollar Brady, who arrived in Chicago today, with the intention of getting more Silver Dollars in circulation. Brady, big, six-foot wealthy rancher from the West, walked into the Hotel Sherman today, his prize horse trailing behind. First, he registered with the horse at his heels . . . then he went into the coffee shop and both man and beast had a bite to eat. He had wired for reservations for himself and horse, and was given a penthouse high above the street on the 17th floor, with a special corral, hay, oats and all, for his horse. "The trouble with paper dollars is, you don't feel 'em in your pocket," Brady said. "Now, it's different with Silver Dollars. You know you got 'em. They seem to mean a whole lot more. But because they're heavy, you spend 'em a lot quicker." Brady said he was going to urge Chicago merchants to pay their employees in Silver Dollars. "Then you just watch business boom," he said. Brady, who is an Ambassador of Good Will for the Texas Centennial Exposition at Dallas, wears a valuable belt made of old and rare Silver Dollars.

Class 1 Payment Rates Announced For Will County

Will county average rates of class 1, or soil-conserving payments, is $11.90 an acre, according to announcement received by Byron Gaskill, Pres., of the county agricultural conservation committee thru the extension service of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

"This average county rate is not necessarily the rate which each individual farmer will receive for diverting soil-depleting acreage to soil-conserving acreage under the new farm program," Gaskill said. "Individual rates will be higher or lower than the county average depending upon the productivity of the individual farm, just as the county rates all over the country are higher or lower than the national average of $10 an acre, depending upon the productivity of the land in each county."

Individual rates for farms in Will County will be established by the agricultural conservation committee, and each farmer who filled out a work sheet will be notified of the class 1 payment for his farm.

Rates for Will and other counties were based upon the productivity of all farms in each county, taking into consideration average acreages and yields of principal soil-depleting crops over a period of years. The figures were compiled by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration from reports furnished by the state statistician, the state extension service of the agricultural college, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics and the agricultural census.

Gaskill pointed out that class 1 payments are different from class 2 payments which are made for following approved soil-building practices and are limited to one dollar for each acre of soil-conserving crops on the farm. Farmers may qualify for either or both types of payments.

Wallace Paid 300 Firms 38 Million

Bares Names of Producers Who Received More Than $10,000 from AAA

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The AAA paid $38,460,000 to some 300 producers in three years for not raising crops they were in business to raise, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace revealed in a report.

Here are a few disclosed by Wallace in response to a senate request made at the vigorous insistence of Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) that names of those who received more than $10,000 each be bared:

Hawaiian Commercial and Sugar Company, Ltd., $1,022,037; Oahu Sugar Company of Hawaii, $904,562; Lihue Plantation company, Hawaii, $815,409; Ewa Plantation company, Hawaii, $751,843; Waialua Agricultural Company, Ltd., Hawaii, $740,095.

Bank Gets $705,488.

Even the National City Bank of New York apparently got paid by the AAA for not raising sugar, for it received $705,488.

Largest sugar payments on the mainland went to the United States Sugar Corporation of Florida, which was paid $785,038.

Lee Wilson and Company, Mississippi county, Arkansas, received the largest cotton payments—$392,702, while the Delta and Pine Land company of Mississippi received $318,287. Oscar Johnston, manager of the AAA cotton pool, is the Delta manager.

Large Hog, Wheat Payments.

The largest hog payment went to Fantana Farms in California, $155,575.

Among the large wheat payments were $51,066 to the Campbell Farming Corporation of Montana; and a total of $134,834 to the Sutter Basin Corp., Ltd., and the Sutter Improvement Company of California.

CHAPTER XI

"Who murdered Mike Kelly? ... Pat—darling—was it you?"

The Globe had answered the question, but, in Southampton, Barry Gilbert held this girl-of-all-girls in his arms, and asked it again.

For a moment, she stared at him, dazed and inert, and then she pushed him away.

"Let me sit down, please," she said, coldly.

She remained standing, however, when Barry released her, though she still clung to the chair at which she had stopped when she came into the room. "Do you really think I could kill anyone?" she asked, with just a trace of amusement tempering the wonder and resentment in her tone. "But, of course, I know why you think it. My father said he couldn't tell the truth because of a woman. The woman was my dead mother."

"I'm sorry," Barry began.

"It doesn't matter," the girl interrupted. "Nothing much matters now. Peter says this evening's Globe completely clears young Ridder, and that they'll probably release him tomorrow. That's all you want, isn't it. And, if you don't mind, I'll go upstairs to my father. He's really ill."

She had closed the door to the hall after her and Barry opened it.

"Can I do anything?" he asked lamely.

"No, I don't think anybody can," Pat answered. "Nothing father or I could say now would help Morano, or anybody. Is Evans outside?"

"Yes."

"Then, of course, you'll see Peggy. Her worries are over. Please tell her how glad I am, and that I'll phone later about Jacky."

They were in the hall by this time and the butler appeared on the landing.

"Will you come to your father, Miss?" he said, quietly.

"I'm coming," Pat replied, just as quietly and, without looking at Barry again, turned and ran up the stairs.

Well, that was over—along with everything else. "I made a clean sweep while I was at it," Barry told himself, ruefully, on his way to the hospital. "What did I have to shoot off my mouth for, just at the last minute? 'My dead mother.' Three words, and my whole train of suspicion went off the rails."

It had taken Harwood barely more than 24 hours to get his man. "He certainly worked fast," Barry paid mental tribute; "once he'd identified that voice on the phone." Some time before the evening papers would reach Southampton. What was the difference? "Nothing much matters now," Pat had said, and it didn't. They'd probably release young Ridder tomorrow, and two days later, old Ridder'd be in New York. "I've got plenty to do," Barry said to himself, and to Evans, "I've had a cable from Mr. Ridder. He's on the Bremen, arriving Saturday. You'd better get your wife back to town."

They were at the hospital now, and Evans made no reply.

Peggy came into the reception room. "I can't stay," she began. "Jacky's in a good deal of pain. The doctor's up there. He says everything's all right, but, somehow, I'm worried."

"Can you stand a bit of good news?" Barry asked.

"I don't know. I haven't had any in so long—"

"It's about Jack."

He wanted to "break it gently," but Peg couldn't wait.

"He's—What is it? Just another clue? Or—Go on, please!"

"They've arrested Morano. Peter phoned Judge Hamblidge. He says Jack'll be out tomorrow."

Peg didn't move.

At least her body didn't but she ran her tongue over her lips, and her hands opened and closed spasmodically.

After a moment: "No foolin'?" she said.

It was an absurd thing to say, but, in a long experience with suffering, Barry had learned that just such things are said under stress.

"No foolin'."

Tears came into the girl's eyes, and flowed down her cheeks.

"It's in tonight's Globe," Barry told her. "The papers aren't here yet, but I'll ask Evans to bring you one. There doesn't seem to be any possibility of mistake. I'll go in to town by the first train in the morning. I'll take care of everything, and keep in close touch with you."

"Thanks," Peggy said.

One syllable, but Barry thought he had never heard so much praise and gratitude before. His own eyes were threatened with moisture, so he declared, "You'd better get back to the boy. Pat's going to phone later, and I'll ring up tonight. That's all now."

And he left the room as abruptly as Pat had left him, a few minutes ago.

"Home?" Evans asked.

Barry nodded. That word was the last straw.

"Anything else, sir?" Evans inquired, in front of the Ridder house.

"Yes, please. The instant the evening papers get to Southampton, will you bring me a copy of the Globe, and take one to Mrs. Rogers?" He gave the chauffeur a quarter. "Kelly's murderer's under arrest," he continued, "and we're through 'sleuthing.' You'll find it all in the Globe."

"Yes, sir."

Evans was thinking of something else.

"You understand—about Mrs. Evans?" Barry asked.

"Yes, sir." A pause. "You ain't staying here yourself, I take it."

"I'm leaving tomorrow."

"I was wondering," Evans said, "would you like us to come with you?"

"Very much," Barry answered, "but it can't be done."

"You ain't always going to live in a hotel—begging your pardon, sir. Mrs. Evans is a mighty good cook."

"Thanks," Barry returned, "but my cooking's going to be provided by the state of New York. You may as well know the truth, Evans. I'm not Mr. Ridder. Never was. I jimmied my way into this house for a night's shelter, and then you and Willetts came, and thought I was Ridder, and I let you go on thinking so. The game's up now. The boss gets back Saturday, and what happens then is anyone's guess."

Evans said, "Yes, sir."

"That's all, except I'd be glad if you'd tell Willetts, and the rest. It'll save me introducing the subject."

"Yes, sir."

"And better stand by tonight. I may have to drive back to the hospital."

"Yes, sir. . . I was wondering—"

"You do a good deal of that, don't you?"

I was wondering how you'd like to go to my sister's. You know—where I live in town. You could lay low there a while, and then slip away somewhere."

"That's swell of you," Barry responded. "Much obliged. But I think I've done all the slipping that's good for a man. Tell Willetts, when you get a chance, and remember to bring me the Globe."

It was close on to five o'clock then, and "plenty to do" before dinner. Willetts wasn't about—luckily. Barry let himself in with his key, and ran up to his room. Should he pack first, or get the rest of it out of the way?

He decided to begin with "the rest of it."

From a long envelope, in his inside pocket, he took all his vouchers. Then, on a sheet of note paper, he wrote, "Received . . . Cash $200." Beneath that, he listed the check from Mrs. Ridder, and "board, lodging, etc." Under "Disbursed," he credited himself with the same check, which had been banked for Peggy, and with whatever sums he had given her, and a few minor expenditures. "That leaves my account straight," Barry thought. "Except for unlawful entry, tampering with the mails, and pretending to be somebody I wasn't."

It left his bank account far from straight. When he'd subtracted "Disbursed" from "Received," and made out his check for the balance, the result was a rather startling overdraft.

"All right," Barry said. "I'll sell out my wardrobe. Studs, and cuff-links, and things. I guess I won't need 'em any more."

He wanted—terribly—to write a letter to Mrs. Ridder. It would have begun, "Dear Mother: (Not mine, of course.) That was too maudlin. 'Me: I'm just a sob-sister,' Barry berated himself, tucking his accounts, accompanied only by his check, into an envelope, and inscribing it, "Mrs. John Clarke Ridder, Addressed." He propped the envelope against a calendar, and, for a moment, sat looking at it. "I wish I could find my mother," he had thought, his first morning at Southampton. He wished it even more fervently now, after all these weeks of "make believe."

"I've got to write Pat," he decided, at last. "I certainly owe her an apology, and a 'good-by.' This letter certainly mustn't be 'maudlin.'"

"Dear Pat," he started. "Dear Pat: (I suppose I should write 'Miss Hamblidge' now, but I can't.) You wouldn't let me say I was sorry for what happened today, but I am. I won't try to excuse myself. You'll forget it, I hope, as quickly as you'll forget everything else in this grotesque association. I won't forget. You're the realest lady I ever knew. So this is thanks and good-by to you and your father, and—most sincerely trusting that your worries, like Peg's, are over—I remain always respectfully, Barry Gilbert."

Packing proved complicated. Most of his clothing—piled for long ago—was out here, and had to be taken in. But there was no suit-case. Neat, to the end, Barry folded his belongings into two tailor's boxes. He hadn't quite finished folding when Willetts knocked.

"Evening paper, sir."

"Thank you."

"And your key, sir. You left it in the front door."

"You'd better keep it. And there's a letter for Mrs. Ridder on the desk there. I'd like her to get it when she arrives."

"Very good, sir. Dinner at seven?"

"If you please."

That was all. No reference to Barry's packing, or the confession that—Barry felt sure—had been relayed by Evans half an hour ago. "I'm taking the 7:21 back to town tomorrow morning," Barry said, as Willetts was closing the door, but Willetts only answered, "Yes, sir," and went on closing it.

Morano hadn't been arrested. So much was clear from the screaming headlines Barry scanned. However, "that ends it," Barry felt sure. "Harwood did a swell job. Why didn't I follow up the number of that cab? It didn't seem of the least importance when the taxi-driving medico gave it to me. I might have known it was, though, when Ernie wrote it down in his notebook."

Dinner was uneventful—with Willetts remembering his "position," and behaving as any well-trained butler might have been expected to behave. Afterward, Barry phoned Peg. She had seen the Globe, but was still dubious. "Do you really think they'll let Jack out now?"

"Certainly. They're not going to get that sheet started again on Tammany Hall."

"And it'll be tomorrow, you think?"

"Probably. I'll keep in touch with you," Barry promised, and finished his packing. Then he re-read the Globe story, and marked parts of it—to ponder in town.

Throughout breakfast next morning, Barry wondered whether this remarkable butler could know he was "going for good." "I've left a few parting gifts on my desk," he ventured, at last. "For cook, and everybody. Will you take care of 'em?"

"Yes, sir."

"I shan't be back. I suppose Evans told you."

"Yes, sir."

That was too much.

Barry said, "Well, what do you think about it?"

"That's not for me to say, sir. My place is to obey orders. I've tried to do that, sir. If I've made a mistake, it hasn't been for want of trying."

"Your mistake was quite natural," Barry reassured him. "You'd been told you'd find young Mr. Ridder here, and you found me. I said I was young Mr. Ridder. That seems to let you out."

"Yes, sir."

Willetts hesitated.

"Anyway, that wasn't the mistake I had in mind sir. That was a natural mistake. I thought you were a gentleman. I still think so. It's five after seven, sir."

Barry just made the train. At Southampton, he bought a morning paper, and read of Morano's death. Even the conservative Times regarded that as the end of the case against Rogers. "Night Club Owner, Accused of Kelly Murder, Killed Resisting Arrest," its headlines began, and ended with, "Move to Free Rogers Expected Today." Barry pored over both stories—that in the Times and that in last night's Globe—all the way to New York. "Well," he reflected, "one of my suspects was guilty, anyway. Peter Winslow can't laugh that off."

And, suddenly, he let the newspaper fall, and leaned forward, with his wrists on his knees.

"It's queer though," he said, almost aloud, to the click of the wheels. "Very queer. Very damned queer."

At the station, he stopped for a timetable. "Is there one," he asked, "that gives all the trains out of here?"

The man grinned at him, thrusting forward three thick folders.

Ten o'clock found him at Winslow's office.

"Mr. Winslow won't be in today," Peter's secretary announced. "Mrs. Winslow had a bad heart attack last night. So bad that Mr. Winslow telephoned to the Hamblidges. They're with Mrs. Winslow now."

"Was that your last news?"

"No. Mr. Winslow called up half an hour ago to say that Mrs. Winslow's a little better."

"Had he seen this?"

Barry indicated the headline in the Times.

"Yes. He talked to Mr. Colton about it. Mr. Colton's one of the young men in the office, you know. He's gone to the district attorney to ask for Rogers' release. Mr. Winslow said, if you called I was to tell you that would be only a matter of hours. Should you like us to phone you when there's anything certain?"

"Please. I suppose there's no use of my going to the Tombs now?"

"Not much. Mr. Colton's going there from the district attorney's. We'll phone you."

Barry phoned Peggy, and then strolled across Forty-second street. It was a delightful morning, and his rather comic bundles had been dispatched to his hotel from the station.

"No sense in my following 'em yet," Barry told himself. "I don't want to sit around that cursed room all day."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Many Civil War Desertions

By the end of the Civil War there were 13,046 desertions of Illinois enlisted men. This was due to political trouble.

Barry nodded. That word was the last straw.

"Anything else, sir?" Evans inquired, in front of the Ridder house.

"Yes, please. The instant the evening papers get to Southampton, will you bring me a copy of the Globe, and take one to Mrs. Rogers?" He gave the chauffeur a quarter. "Kelly's murderer's under arrest," he continued, "and we're through 'sleuthing.' You'll find it all in the Globe."

"Yes, sir."

Evans was thinking of something else.

"You understand—about Mrs. Evans?" Barry asked.

"Yes, sir." A pause. "You ain't staying here yourself, I take it."

"I'm leaving tomorrow."

"I was wondering," Evans said, "would you like us to come with you?"

"Very much," Barry answered, "but it can't be done."

Barry nodded. That word was the last straw.

"I'm leaving tomorrow."

"I was wondering," Evans said, "would you like us to come with you?"

"Very much," Barry answered, "but it can't be done."

"You ain't always going to live in a hotel—begging your pardon, sir. Mrs. Evans is a mighty good cook."

"Thanks," Barry returned, "but my cooking's going to be provided by the state of New York. You may as well know the truth, Evans. I'm not Mr. Ridder. Never was. I jimmied my way into this house for a night's shelter, and then you and Willetts came, and thought I was Ridder, and I let you go on thinking so. The game's up now. The boss gets back Saturday, and what happens then is anyone's guess."

Evans said, "Yes, sir."

"That's all, except I'd be glad if you'd tell Willetts, and the rest. It'll save me introducing the subject."

"Yes, sir."

"And better stand by tonight. I may have to drive back to the hospital."

"Yes, sir. . . I was wondering—"

"You do a good deal of that, don't you?"

I was wondering how you'd like to go to my sister's. You know—where I live in town. You could lay low there a while, and then slip away somewhere."

"That's swell of you," Barry responded. "Much obliged. But I think I've done all the slipping that's good for a man. Tell Willetts, when you get a chance, and remember to bring me the Globe."

It was close on to five o'clock then, and "plenty to do" before dinner. Willetts wasn't about—luckily. Barry let himself in with his key, and ran up to his room. Should he pack first, or get the rest of it out of the way?

He decided to begin with "the rest of it."

From a long envelope, in his inside pocket, he took all his vouchers. Then, on a sheet of note paper, he wrote, "Received . . . Cash $200." Beneath that, he listed the check from Mrs. Ridder, and "board, lodging, etc." Under "Disbursed," he credited himself with the same check, which had been banked for Peggy, and with whatever sums he had given her, and a few minor expenditures. "That leaves my account straight," Barry thought. "Except for unlawful entry, tampering with the mails, and pretending to be somebody I wasn't."

It left his bank account far from straight. When he'd subtracted "Disbursed" from "Received," and made out his check for the balance, the result was a rather startling overdraft.

"All right," Barry said. "I'll sell out my wardrobe. Studs, and cuff-links, and things. I guess I won't need 'em any more."

He wanted—terribly—to write a letter to Mrs. Ridder. It would have begun, "Dear Mother: (Not mine, of course.) That was too maudlin. 'Me: I'm just a sob-sister,' Barry berated himself, tucking his accounts, accompanied only by his check, into an envelope, and inscribing it, "Mrs. John Clarke Ridder, Addressed." He propped the envelope against a calendar, and, for a moment, sat looking at it. "I wish I could find my mother," he had thought, his first morning at Southampton. He wished it even more fervently now, after all these weeks of "make believe."

"I've got to write Pat," he decided, at last. "I certainly owe her an apology, and a 'good-by.' This letter certainly mustn't be 'maudlin.'"

"Dear Pat," he started. "Dear Pat: (I suppose I should write 'Miss Hamblidge' now, but I can't.) You wouldn't let me say I was sorry for what happened today, but I am. I won't try to excuse myself. You'll forget it, I hope, as quickly as you'll forget everything else in this grotesque association. I won't forget. You're the realest lady I ever knew. So this is thanks and good-by to you and your father, and—most sincerely trusting that your worries, like Peg's, are over—I remain always respectfully, Barry Gilbert."

Packing proved complicated. Most of his clothing—piled for long ago—was out here, and had to be taken in. But there was no suit-case. Neat, to the end, Barry folded his belongings into two tailor's boxes. He hadn't quite finished folding when Willetts knocked.

"Evening paper, sir."

"Thank you."

"And your key, sir. You left it in the front door."

"You'd better keep it. And there's a letter for Mrs. Ridder on the desk there. I'd like her to get it when she arrives."

"Very good, sir. Dinner at seven?"

"If you please."

That was all. No reference to Barry's packing, or the confession that—Barry felt sure—had been relayed by Evans half an hour ago. "I'm taking the 7:21 back to town tomorrow morning," Barry said, as Willetts was closing the door, but Willetts only answered, "Yes, sir," and went on closing it.

Morano hadn't been arrested. So much was clear from the screaming headlines Barry scanned. However, "that ends it," Barry felt sure. "Harwood did a swell job. Why didn't I follow up the number of that cab? It didn't seem of the least importance when the taxi-driving medico gave it to me. I might have known it was, though, when Ernie wrote it down in his notebook."

Dinner was uneventful—with Willetts remembering his "position," and behaving as any well-trained butler might have been expected to behave. Afterward, Barry phoned Peg. She had seen the Globe, but was still dubious. "Do you really think they'll let Jack out now?"

"Certainly. They're not going to get that sheet started again on Tammany Hall."

"And it'll be tomorrow, you think?"

"Probably. I'll keep in touch with you," Barry promised, and finished his packing. Then he re-read the Globe story, and marked parts of it—to ponder in town.

Throughout breakfast next morning, Barry wondered whether this remarkable butler could know he was "going for good." "I've left a few parting gifts on my desk," he ventured, at last. "For cook, and everybody. Will you take care of 'em?"

"Yes, sir."

"I shan't be back. I suppose Evans told you."

"Yes, sir."

That was too much.

Barry said, "Well, what do you think about it?"

"That's not for me to say, sir. My place is to obey orders. I've tried to do that, sir. If I've made a mistake, it hasn't been for want of trying."

"Your mistake was quite natural," Barry reassured him. "You'd been told you'd find young Mr. Ridder here, and you found me. I said I was young Mr. Ridder. That seems to let you out."

Double Duty
"You have to give your constituents what they want," remarked the sympathetic friend.
"The job's harder than that," answered Senator Sorghum. "For purposes of future reference, in case their ideas go wrong, I have to try to educate them in what they ought to have."

Fibious Fish Stories
"Can any of you," the teacher asked, "tell me what amphibious means, and give a sentence to illustrate?"
A bright little boy held up his hand.
"I know, sir. It's fibbing. Most fish stories are fibious."

Applause Always Due
"I have one friend," said Senator Sorghum, "who is always sure to win the plaudits of the crowd."
"To what party does he belong?"
"He isn't a fellow statesman. He's a circus clown."

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

I like the hurdy-gurdy man —
For weary miles around
He scatters through the heat-filled day
A little cheerful sound.

Uncle Phil Says:

See the Bright Side

The world may be pretty sorry, but one does not have to contemplate that phase of it too much. It has others that are brighter.

One needs to learn how to enjoy two or three hours of quiet reflection. You can't be entertained every waking moment.

The best angle from which to approach any problem is the try angle.

Don't Stay with Evil

If you have been tempted into evil, fly from it; it is not falling into the water, but lying in it that drowns.

The people of Europe stay mad at each other all the time. They are as bad as our mountain feudists.

Displays of temper are sheer waste of vitality. They help nobody and hinder everybody.

Sometimes a man has no confidence in other men because he has none in himself.

A Friend Cheers

When your friend remains with you to cheer you at a time you are unhappy that's the acid test.

All you need in order to revel in Nature is a tent, a cot, a pan of bacon and eggs, and immeasurable love of the woods.

Alas, one fears there is getting to be more horse-power than horse-sense in a machine age.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"GOD" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 5.

The Golden Text was, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me" (Exodus 20:3).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Praise ye the Lord. Praise God in his sanctuary: praise him in the firmament of his power. Praise him for his mighty acts: praise him according to his excellent greatness. Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord. Praise ye the Lord" (Psalms 150:1, 2, 6).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Question.—What is God? Answer.—God is incorporeal, divine, supreme, infinite Mind, Spirit, Soul, Principle, Life, Truth, Love."

Question.—Are these terms synonymous? Answer.—They are. They refer to one absolute God. They are also intended to express the nature, essence, and wholeness of Deity" (p. 465).

TOMATOES give

that TOUCH

THE soul of a salad was said by a French chef to be a touch of garlic, but the true salad lover knows that tomatoes contribute a touch to them, either as the main part or as an ingredient of the dressing, which can be obtained in no other way. Take, for instance, hearts of lettuce with this Thousand Island Dressing: Mix together one cup mayonnaise, three tablespoons canned tomato paste, one tablespoon chopped green pepper and ten chopped stuffed olives.

It is the tomato in this combination that gives it its individual taste.

In the following pear and tomato salad, too, the tomatoes give the dish a distinct and delicious flavor which it would not have without them.

Pear and Tomato Salad: Slice ripe, chilled tomatoes, and lay one slice in each of eight individual nests of lettuce. Place half a pear from a No. 2 can on top of each, cut side up. Mix one cream cheese with three tablespoons chili sauce, and pile in the pear cavities. Garnish with strips of canned pimiento, and serve with either mayonnaise or French dressing. Serves eight.

Makes Mold Delicious

Meat and Cucumber Mold: Soften one tablespoon gelatin in two tablespoons water and dissolve in one cup of boiling canned tomato juice. Add one teaspoon lemon juice and salt and pepper to taste. When cool and beginning to thicken, add one-half cup mayonnaise, two cups finely cut meat, one cup diced cucumbers and two tablespoons chopped pickle relish. The meat may be one cup ham plus one cup chicken (or contents of a 6-ounce can chicken) or equal quantities of chicken and veal, ham and veal or any such combination. Pour into wet oblong mold and chill. Turn out onto platter and garnish as desired. Serve in slices. Serves eight.*
